The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wang in view of Beck.

Details of the rejection have already been set forth in the last Office action. The details are incorporated herein by reference thereto.

In the communication filed on February 7, 2003 Applicants contended that the applied references do not teach "the key information being contained in the message as part of attribute data thereof and used to identify a predetermined handler program relevant to the message". See lines 45-55 of column 9 in Wang. The e-mail address in Wang includes an attribute data called priority code. The closer the priority code to the security code, the priority of the e-mail message is higher. A priority handler in accordance with the priority code set in the e-mail address is retrieved for processing the e-mail message.

Applicants further contended that the applied references do not teach "table that defines relationships between the key information and the handler programs associated therewith". Although Wang did not explicitly disclose such a table, table for associating types of priority with the corresponding handlers is inherent in a system such as Wang because the circuit which retrieves the proper handler in accordance with the type of priority must know the association in order for it to function properly. This technique is similar to interrupt handling. See lines 4-13 of column 10 in Wang for example. Dependent on the type of interrupt encountered, the system of Wang checks with a register (containing a table for associating types of interrupts with different interrupt handlers) for retrieving the interrupt handler associating with the interrupt encountered.

As to the combinability of the two applied references, the Examiner does not rely on Beck for any modification of Wang. Rather, the Examiner merely relies on the Beck reference for the teaching of the inherence of a field extractor in an execution unit such as Wang's. In response to applicant's argument that the extractor of Beck can not be used in Wang (Applicants' last paragraph on page 5 of their response), the test for obviousness is not whether the features of a secondary reference may be bodily incorporated into the structure of the primary reference; nor is it that the claimed invention must be expressly suggested in any one or all of the references. Rather, the test is what the combined teachings of the references would have suggested to those of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981).

With respect to Applicants' arguments in the last paragraph of page 2 to the last line on page 4 of the response, Applicants appear to comparing their disclosure with the specifications of the applied references rather than comparing their claims with the invention as constructed by the Examiner in his rejection. Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

Art Unit: 2155

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
